Tina Tudoric-Ghemo is a South African-born, Croatian-based Fine Art Landscape Photographer. Her desire for new experiences and love of the land and nature has led her to capture some of the most extreme places in the world.

Tina's trip to Namibia gave her the opportunity to capture the camel-thorn tree skeletons in Dead Vlei, assumed to have formed over 1000 years ago. This journey culminated in her series Shifting Landscapes. While these vast areas appear to be mere wastelands, each image is in fact an encounter with the beauty of a landscape in crisis, speaking about the relationship between creation and desolation through the lens of time and change.

Tina spends much of her time travelling and photographing Croatia's beautiful landscapes while further articulating her creative vision. She is currently in the process of completing her MFA in Photography at the Academy of Art in San Francisco.
